RFK Returns To Capital He Loved

Follows Brother To Grassy Hill In Arlington

WASHINGTON. — (UPI) — Robert Francis Kennedy comes home to the Capital he loved today.

Like his brother before him, the slain Senator passes among cherished national shrines along hushed streets lined with uniformed servicemen and behind, the silent and grieving throngs.

Like his brother before him, he goes to a grassy slope high on a hill in Arlington National Cemetery across the Potomac River in Virginia.

From Union Station near Capitol Hill the hearse bearing his body and the cortege of family, friends and dignitaries was routed the few blocks southward to the New Senate Office Building and under the very window he looked from on the Capitol.

Then west down Constitution Avenue looking toward the Washington Monument, the Lincoln Memorial, Arlington National Cemetery and where the sun sets.

Past the Senate Wing of the Capitol where this man of wealth spoke for the poor and the voiceless.

Rites, Burial For Kennedy

NEW YORK.—(UPI)—This was the day to praise Robert Francis Kennedy and to bury him.

The nation's elite bid final farewell to the slain senator in the cathedral where the unsung and the ordinary for 24 hours honored him with the greatest outpouring of public grief in the city's history.

President Johnson led the 2,300 friends and colleagues of the assassinated senator in mourning at a 10 a.m. requiem mass at St. Patrick's Cathedral.

As the last of an estimated 151,000 mourners passed by the bier at about 5 a.m. EDT today, the huge bronze doors of the great cathedral were locked. Inside, kneeling at the head of the casket, her face drawn and weary, was Kennedy's widow, Ethel. She bowed her head and prayed.

A Few Moments in Private

Mrs. Kennedy asked the press to leave the cathedral, that she might have a few moments in private by the coffin. But a television camera was trained on her during her prayers and her moments of solitude were shared with predawn viewers.

The last mourner was Gerard Rubsam, 26, who had passed the body once, then sat in a nearby pew for 45 minutes and walked past again.

"I tried to find out during those 45 minutes why I came here tonight," he said as the massive doors banged shut behind him. "Bobby Kennedy had a personality very few people have.

"He was a man who represented America."

Train Bears Body to Capital

A special 21-car, black-draped train was readied at Pennsylvania Station to bear Kennedy to Washington for burial on a grassy Arlington National Cemetery hillside near his martyred brother, John.

Archbishop Terence J. Cooke of New York, chief celebrant of the Requiem Mass, prepared a eulogy praising the accomplishments of the senator, whose brief life was ended by an assassin's bullet. Among the celebrants was Richard Cardinal Cushing, archbishop of Boston, who delivered the eulogy and celebrated the [illegible]
