Dear James Ray....

I returned home last night from New York. I have, of course, noted the developments in your case.

As you know, I have meticulously observed the terms of the contract existing between you and me. All payments due to you have been made to Mr. Hanes as per the contract.

In one of your recent letters to me, you will recall that you suggested that I should make future payments to your brother Jerry. When Jerry came to see me, we reached agreement on all points, and I asked how he wanted the money sent to him.

What I need now is instruction from you as to where to send your money? Do I send it to Mr. Foreman? Or to Jerry? Or to you?

I assume I will continue hearing from you, either directly or through Mr. Foreman.

Best wishes,

Wm. B. Huie
